

This is a small introduction to the gyrosopic periodic table. In presenting this picture I do so more as a fellow student, with an interest in discussing it further and exploring with others, its possible implication for chemistry, especially soil science. I do not suggest I have any complete understanding of its interpretation. Instead I have looked into it for some time and have only so far in its interpretation. There are several insights useful for this diagram however it takes a lot to present these coherently and in the necessary context. This is partly why I have not presented this earlier; the necessary text to accompany it will take some time to produce. So here is only a quick overview of my understanding.

The spiral and gyrosopic periodic tables should be seen in relation to the other pictures presented on this site. The "Apple of Life" fits perfectly over the top of this diagram, while all of the implications and inferences drawn from the "World and Personal Manifestations" diagram can also be placed directly upon this picture as well.

I start with Hydrogen at the centre and spiral out from there. Each layer of the periodic table does relate to each layer of our creative reality described by the Astrological model and the "Apple of Life". i.e. Hydrogen in the centre is the one fold level, the Lithium Beryllium, B,C,N,O,Fl ring is the pre-manifestation polarised twofold layer, the Sodium, Magnesium, Al, Si,P,S,Cl layer relates to the 3 fold layer of the physical bodies, while the K,Ca,Sc, Va -Ger,Ti,Ar,Se,Br, layer related to the fourfold etheric body layer and so on.

This places the elements within the 'sphere' of activity to which it might relate.

Once anything is placed upon a circle rather than a rectangle, we can begin to apply several rules, which relate to circles. Firstly we can divide the circle into the two axis of vertical and horizontal. This provides us with an orientation of vertical spirit axis and the horizontal matter plane. From RS we have understood that the vertical axis of manifestation is maintained as a polarity between the Ego/Spirit pole above and the physical pole below. The horizontal plane is maintained through the polarity of the Etheric pole and the Astral pole. The question of which of these should be on the right or the left remains.

The Ego/Spirit pole, produces burning acidic conditions, wherever it works too strongly in biological systems. RS tells us also that it is carried into matter by Hydrogen. It seems appropriate to place the H in the middle, and the halogens, F, Cl arm, on the vertical Ego/Spirit arm, due to these relationships.

As we are dealing with physical manifest matter I felt it appropriate to place it upon an clockwise spiral. The spiral moves in a clockwise motion however the unfolding of the elements occurs in an anticlockwise manner.

The question still lingers as to where the Etheric and Astral poles should be placed. On the left hand bottom side, you will note the intense compound of elements, just below the horizontal axis. These elements are the trace elements found to be central in the development of life and biochemistry. The Cation elements, especially associated with the proper functioning of the etheric body Na, K, Ca Mg are therefore placed in the zone of the Etheric body on the left hand side. The trace elements are placed between the internalised etheric and the World Physical. This suggests they become active when the internalised life processes begin which in the beginning are in relationship to the physical environment in which they find themselves.

This organisation thus provides the primary spiritual body orientation of the periodic table.

One other phenomenon that arises from the circle is the phenomena of polarity relationships. Therefore the arms of the table do not stand in isolation, they form a creative polarity with the elements opposite them. The most marked relations to observe is the Ca, Mg arm opposite the O,S,Se arm. These are all elements intimately connected to the proper functioning of the etheric body in manifest biological organisms.

The 'World and Personal manifestations' diagram identified the vertical and horizontal axis, as indicating the World / External manifestations of the bodies, while the in-between 'mutable' axis indicates the activities of the personalised manifestations of these bodies, as they occur in the four kingdoms of nature.
